BUBBLES.

It is interesting, yet nevertheless true that a great many things that look like "Whalers" eventually to be only a "Bubble." Many, Many years ago, there was one down in Mississippi.

But anyway, little bubbles can cause a lot of trouble, and even if some people call them "pretty bubbles" our friend old Al, doesn't see anything pretty about them.

The whole thing started when Glycothymolene Cat started blowing the blooming things, and it gave the pesky mice an idea, so they started. For awhile they had a great time.

Then the darn old Farmer gets it in his head he'd like to try his hand at "Blowing pretty bubbles", but it seems that the whole darn trouble was that old Al had seen something or somebody riding on the bubbles, and right away he wants to do it too. Well, to begin with Al flopped right off a cliff and lands on his neck. Then he encounters Slick Sam Saleman for the Hercules Soap Co. the strongest soap in the world, and of course Sam is no slouch of a salesman if he does say it himself. Right away he tells old Al that the soap isn't strong enough and sells him a cake of Hercules, after a short snappy demonstration, Al then climbs up on the cliff again and tries it over. But this time he flops harder than ever, and has a swell dream, it is so pleasant he decides to crown himself with a club and go to sleep again.

Aesop Says:

"Many a young fellow has a great time with a miss in his motor."
